MADISON TURNS SHOVEL ON GAINES PARK RENOVATION

BY BOB DEMAREE

A groundbreaking held in downtown Madison on Wednesday will begin a massive revitalization of Gaines Park that is due to be completed by Labor Day.

Gaines, located at 628 Broadway, holds a special significance — especially for the children who grew up in the surrounding neighborhood —as the site of what was once the Broadway School where Black Madisonians were educated from 1880-1957.

Sue Livers, who attended the Broadway School before it closed, said the park is meaningful not just because of what it once was, but also because of what it provides the community.

Livers was a child in the 1950s when, due to segregation, the playground for Black youth was at the bottom of John Paul Park in an area that would sometimes become flooded and with playground equipment that wasn't that good.

"That's where we played because before that we just had the schoolyard" at Broadway School.

The school building was destroyed by fire in the early morning hours of New Year's Day in 1970, and in 1976 the land was dedicated as Gaines Park, giving children a safe place to play that didn't exist in Livers' childhood.

But the creation of Gaines Park was more than 45 years ago, and not much had been done with the site since and the park is badly in need of a refreshing.

"Everybody is so glad to see this come to fruition," said Livers.

CAC awarded $500K grant for new center

BY BOB DEMAREE

The Children's Advocacy Center of Southeastern Indiana has received a $500,000 grant that will allow it to establish a permanent location in Jefferson County by rehabilitating and renovating a structure at 601 West Street in Madison.

The grant announcement was made Thursday in which Jefferson County was one of 22 rural communities to receive federal grant funding through the Public Facilities Program of the Community Development Block Grant.

Children's Advocacy Center of Southeastern Indiana (CAC), a child-friendly nonprofit corporation created to minimize the trauma suffered by victims of child abuse, had previously received $288,778 as a match from the Bethany Legacy Foundation, bringing the overall funding total to $788,778.

CAC is currently renting space at the Clearinghouse, 100 East Second Street, but the new facility will serve both Jefferson and Scott counties once the renovation is complete.

Bethany Legacy shares focus for long-term solutions

BY BOB DEMNAREE

With the goal of making Jefferson County the healthiest county in the world, the Bethany Legacy Foundation (BLF) shared its strategic focus on Thursday to seek long-term solutions for everyone from babies to seniors.

"We want this culture shift to happen here in Jefferson County," said Dora Anim, BLF chief executive officer and president, in a presentation that shared the vision to community leaders and residents at the Cotton Mill Fairfield Inn and Suites by Marriott.

"What if we made a conscious decision together that Jefferson County is a little county in southeastern Indiana that has big goals that can really make a difference and inspire others? What if we moved from temporary and short-term relief to permanent relief to those in need? We know there will always be need for short-term relief, and we will be here to provide it. What we're saying is we want the majority of people who live here to get that permanent relief and reduce that dependency because we know that is going to build the fabric of our community. So, we want a place where children, adults and seniors can live, work and play with hope and dignity."

BLF was established last year after the change of ownership of King's Daughters' Health from Bethany Legacy Foundation to Norton Healthcare. "When the change of ownership happened, Bethany Circle changed from being a hospital owner to being the recipient of more than $100 million. A new Bethany was created and it's the Bethany Legacy Foundation, a private foundation," said Darleen Connolly, chair of the BLF board.

Anim outlined the foundation's mission "to put faith into action and serve Jefferson County by bringing the community together, and creating sustainable solutions for issues affecting health."

"We want this culture shift to happen here in Jefferson County . . . we want a place where children, adults and seniors can live, work and play with hope and dignity."

— Dora Anim
Bethany Legacy Foundation Chief Executive Officer and President

In talking with people in the county, Anim said she has been "continuously heartbroken by the stories that I hear every day about the people who live here. These are stories of pain and despair, stories of despicable child abuse, heart-breaking domestic violence, mental health, substance abuse. There is so much pain in this county. And you know the stories. You hear them, too. We're certainly not unique to other places in the country but this is our reality that we face. These are the people here that we need to help."

She said old solutions aren't working. In 2021, Anim said $485 billion was given to U.S. charities, yet critical issues still are not being effectively resolved. "The reality that we face is that we are part of a greater society that is part of a system that repeats the same thing over and over again," she said. "What I am saying is we are pumping a lot of resources to solve what I call short-term solutions. Short-term relief does not lead to long-term solutions."

Anim said BLF's strategy for a healthy Jefferson County combines dignity, hope and self-reliance. With that, she said the goal is for people in need and suffering to recognize their own dignity, to have hope and realize their own capacity to achieve. If people have those things, Anim believes they can "flourish to do the things that are quite unimaginable. That's exactly what we want for this county."

She outlined three components that include strong youth, empowered adults and stable seniors. "No one group precedes the other, or is a higher priority because we realize this is not a hierarchy," said Anim. "These are all interconnected issues, and we want to support the entire county, from babies to seniors, looking at the full spectrum and multi-generational approach. What it matters is to get acutely good at social problem solving, and that's what we want to work on today."

BY COURIER STAFF REPORT

Madison Police responding to a domestic battery call arrested a Madison woman Thursday in the 400 block of Moody Park Lane.

The alleged victim called for an ambulance, reporting that she had been bitten in the face.

When Madison Officer Kayla Taylor-Moore arrived on scene, she found an adult victim standing in the street with an injury to her chin, and provided first aid until the emergency medical service arrived. The victim was transported to the Norton King's Daughters' Health Emergency Room for treatment.

Kiara Paige Parker

An investigation by police determined that the woman lived at the address with Kiara Paige Parker, 23, Madison. The two were involved in a verbal dispute when Parker allegedly bit the victim on the chin, causing the injury.

Parker was charged with Criminal Confinement-Serious Bodily Injury, a Level 3 felony; and Domestic Battery-Serious Bodily Injury, a Level 5 felony, and lodged in the Jefferson County Jail without bond.

James Michael Bare

Taylor-Moore was assisted by Madison Police Officers Adam Guzman and Graham Heffelfinger and Chief John Wallace.

Elsewhere on Thursday, a report of suspicious activity in the 300 block of East Third Street led to the arrest of James Michael Bare, 31, Vevay, for Possession of Methamphetamine, a Level 6 felony, after a search by investigating officers Andrew Gibbs and Kyle Potter

A follow-up investigation found Bare also had outstanding warrants for theft in both Clark and Jefferson counties.

Patty Jackson, deputy director of Southern Indiana Regional Planning Commission (SIRPC), which coordinated the grant application process and administration for CAC, said Thursday she does not yet have a timeline for construction to start but noted the grant requires the project be completed in 18 months. "We have to go through a release of funds process and then they have to get the plans finalized and let out for bid," she said.

The rehabilitation will include making the building compliant with the American Disabilities Act (ADA) including installation of an elevator. Additionally, there will Heating Ventilation and Air Conditioning (HVAC) work along with other structural improvements.

A total of $12.5 million in federal grant funding to the 22 Indiana rural communities was announced Thursday by Lt. Gov. Suzanne Crouch and the Indiana Office of Community and Rural Affairs.

LEGACY

Anim said BLF's funding priorities will be "things that will affect the culture shift" and bring long-term solutions. They include projects that have systems level impact to bring structural changes and align to BLF's mission for sustainable solutions. The project's priorities will also be peer supported, catalyzing projects and initiatives, fill gaps in needs, create prevention, and deal with root causes versus symptoms.

Innovation is also important. "We know what we're doing is not always working so we're looking for initiatives that question the status quo, and break from previous practices," Anim said. Also, "we want solutions that we can test pilot and scale that requires taking some risks."

"Bethany's Legacy is really the legacy of those 12 women in 1896" who created King's Daughters' Hospital, Connolly said. "It's also the legacy of all the generations of Bethany women through the 20th century, and now in the 21st century. In a very sense it has become not only our legacy but our inheritance. We will honor our history and the women who were a part of it by the work that we will be doing in our community."

Madison Parks Director Matt Woolard said the improvements will include new playground equipment that incorporates a slide with the same pour-in-place rubber surface that's in place at the Oak Hill and Hargan-Matthews parks. The basketball court will be refurbished and the color scheme for the playground and the striping on the basketball court will be purple and gold in honor of the Broadway School colors. Additionally, there will be a new and expanded shelter house, a stage structure built in the back of the park, and new fencing around the perimeter.

Wednesday's groundbreaking ceremony included remembrances of the Broadway School, the first commissioned African American high school in Indiana in September of 1880.

Livers recalled Bernard Jenkins, who lived a block over on Elm Street, and rang the bell when school was to start. "When he rang the first bell, that meant you had 10 minutes to get to school. When he rang the second bell, you should be in your seat," she noted.

Chuck Cosby, also a student at Broadway School from first to eighth grades, said the bell also rang at noon for the students to go home for lunch and then again at 12:45 p.m. calling the students to be back in their classrooms by 1 p.m. "The best bell that was rung was the 3:30 p.m. That's when school was out," he said.

The school continued to operate until 1957, then was sold to the city to become a community center until it was destroyed by fire.

A Broadway School basketball uniform worn by Joe Perry in third grade was on display at Wednesday's event. Perry noted that after Broadway School closed, he attended classes at Lydia Middleton Elementary, which he had mixed feelings about. While there was good that came from the integration of the Black students into the Madison schools, Perry's classmates were divided up. "It was sad, leaving all your friends behind. Some went to Lydia Middleton and some went to Eggleston. It was bittersweet."

Gaines Park is named for the Rev. Strocco Maurice Gaines, who served as pastor of the Madison Broadway Baptist Church for more than 60 years beginning in 1916. "Because of the relationship between the school and the Broadway Church, graduations took place at the church," said Livers.

Madison Bob Courtney said the process of revitalizing Gaines Park began four years ago during a conversation with people from the neighborhood.

"We were looking at this park, and talking about what it meant to this community — the community of Madison and certainly this neighborhood," Courtney said, noting the park is "important to the history of Madison and to the people who go to church at Broadway (Baptist Church), and that's why we have put careful consideration into what we want this to be."

A few months ago, Madison City Council appropriated the funds "to make this park become a reality" and Wednesday's groundbreaking begins the work on site to bring those plans to fruition.

Courtney said improvements to Gaines Park, and plans to improve additional parks, are an investment in Madison's future. "Parks are so critical to the health and wellness to our community, and that's why we're so focused on bringing back our parks because they play such a vital role in our community."

Livers and her husband, Ray, participated in the planning process for the park along with Phillip Cosby, grandson of Chuck Cosby. Tony Steinhardt III, the city's director of development, and Madison Parks Board members were also involved.

"There has been a lot of thought and planning that has gone into this," said Woolard. "We're very excited about the future of Madison and future of the parks department."

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Saturday, Feb. 25, the 56th day of 2023. There are 309 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On Feb. 25, 1964, Muhammad Ali (then known as Cassius Clay) became world heavyweight boxing champion as he defeated Sonny Liston in Miami Beach.

On this date:

In 1901, United States Steel Corp. was incorporated by J.P. Morgan.

In 1913, the 16th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution, giving Congress the power to levy and collect income taxes, was declared in effect by Secretary of State Philander Chase Knox.

In 1919, Oregon became the first state to tax gasoline, at one cent per gallon.

In 1954, Gamal Abdel Nasser became Egypt's prime minister after the country's president, Mohammed Naguib, was effectively ousted in a coup.

In 1957, the Supreme Court, in Butler v. Michigan, overturned a Michigan statute making it a misdemeanor to sell books containing obscene language that would tend to corrupt "the morals of youth."

In 1973, the Stephen Sondheim musical "A Little Night Music" opened at Broadway's Shubert Theater.

In 1991, during the Persian Gulf War, 28 Americans were killed when an Iraqi Scud missile hit a U.S. barracks in Dhahran, Saudi Arabia.

In 1994, American-born Jewish settler Baruch Goldstein opened fire with an automatic rifle inside the Tomb of the Patriarchs in the West Bank, killing 29 Muslims before he was beaten to death by worshippers.

In 1997, a jury in Media, Pennsylvania, convicted chemical fortune heir John E. du Pont of third-degree murder, deciding he was mentally ill when he shot and killed world-class wrestler David Schultz. (Du Pont died in prison in December 2010 while serving a 13- to 30-year sentence; he was 72.)

In 2020, U.S. health officials warned that the coronavirus was certain to spread more widely in the United States; the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention urged Americans to be prepared. President Donald Trump, speaking in India, said the virus was "very well under control" in the U.S.

Ten years ago: A high-stakes civil trial started in New Orleans to assign blame and help figure out exactly how much more BP and other companies should pay for the 2010 Gulf oil spill. (U.S. District Judge Carl Barbier ruled in September 2014 that BP acted with "gross negligence"; BP ended up reaching a record-setting $20 billion settlement with the federal government and five Gulf states.)

Five years ago: China's official news agency said the country's ruling Communist Party had proposed scrapping term limits for China's president, appearing to lay the groundwork for Xi Jinping to rule as president beyond 2023. (China's rubber-stamp lawmakers approved that change on March 11.) Students at the Florida high school where 17 classmates and staff members were killed returned to gather belongings that had been abandoned in panic during the shooting.

One year ago: President Joe Biden nominated federal appeals court Judge Ketanji Brown Jackson to the Supreme Court, making her the first Black woman selected to serve on it. (She would be confirmed by the Senate on April 7.) Russian troops bore down on Ukraine's capital, with gunfire and explosions resonating ever closer to the government quarter, in an invasion of a democratic country that fueled fears of wider war in Europe and triggered worldwide efforts to make Russia stop.

Layin It On The Line

By Stephen Dybwad
Retirement Planning/ Wealth Management

What Exactly is a Beneficiary?
When an individual purchases an annuity, they name one or more beneficiaries who will receive the benefits if something happens to them before the contract ends. This could be due to death, disability, or another event that would cause the individual to no longer need their income from the annuity.
The ultimate beneficiary of an annuity is the individual receiving the payments; however, there can also be additional beneficiaries. These can be named by the owner or automatically assigned through the contract. It's essential to understand who these beneficiaries are and how they will be affected by the annuity payments to best plan for retirement income needs.
Primary Beneficiary: The primary beneficiary is typically designated by the owner at the time of purchase and will receive any remaining funds from the annuity after the owner's death. When multiple primary beneficiaries are listed on an account, each may receive a proportional portion of any remaining funds at death based on their age and relationship to the owner. This can include spouses, children, stepchildren, grandchildren, siblings, or other loved ones such as friends or charities. Depending on individual circumstances, these distributions may be taxable, so it's vital to seek expert advice when naming beneficiaries on your account if you're unsure about how taxes may affect them down the road.
Secondary Beneficiaries: A secondary beneficiary is another person who might benefit from an annuity upon the death of both owners (if it's owned jointly). Generally, this would include other family members such as grandchildren or nieces/ nephews but could also include non-family members like charities or religious organizations should you desire. If no secondary beneficiary is named, any remaining funds will pass directly through your estate according to your state's laws regarding intestate succession if applicable (or whatever estate planning documents you left behind).
Contingent Beneficiaries: In some cases, you may choose to name a contingent beneficiary in case both primary and secondary beneficiaries predecease you before taking ownership of your annuity policy. This could include family members or non-family members like charities/religious organizations, depending on whom you want to receive any remaining funds at that time should it ever become necessary for them to do so.
Annuity owners should keep their beneficiaries up-to-date by ensuring they are aware of changes in their life. This includes marriage, divorce, the birth of a child, the death of a loved one, or any other relevant life events that may affect the ownership/ distribution of your annuity policy. It's also important to consider the tax implications for all involved and how you want your funds to be allocated should something unexpected happen. By understanding annuity beneficiaries and taking the time to name them correctly, you ensure that your beneficiaries receive the funds from your annuity in accordance with your wishes. Be sure to talk with an experienced financial advisor for more information about annuities and how naming the correct beneficiaries may help protect both you and those closest to you in the future.
Like all critical issues, please make sure you fully understand how and why a beneficiary selection is essential. Ask for professional help from a licensed and authorized professional.

CLUTCH PERFORMANCE

Madison hits shots in 2nd half to knock off Switzerland

BY DAVID CAMPBELL

Madison didn't take many shots in the second half, but the Cubs hit half of them and that was good enough to propel Madison to a hard-fought 41-33 win over visiting Switzerland County in the boys basketball regular-season finale for both teams on Thursday.

Points were hard to come by for both teams and neither exactly sizzled the nets. But Madison was able to find the points it needed down the stretch to pick up its second win in the past four games.

"Our bugaboo has been the third quarter and we come out and outscore them 13-7 and get the lead going into the fourth which was huge," Madison coach Adam Stotts said. "I don't think we played well offensively, but one thing we've been focusing on is getting better at something every game and so far, the last couple games, it's been the third quarters."

Both teams' defenses dominated the first 16 minutes with Madison's zone holding Switzerland to just 5-of-16 shooting in the first half and the Pacers' man-to-man harassing the Cubs into a 6-for-22 performance. The result was a low-scoring affair with Switzerland taking a 15-13 lead into the break.

Madison (4-19) equaled its first-half scoring total in the third quarter alone as the Cubs began taking better shots and converting those attempts into points. Madison jumped out to a 26-23 lead going into the fourth quarter.

After attempting just two free throws over the first three quarters, the Cubs lived at the line in the fourth and while their 9-of-15 performance wasn't a thing of precision, it was solid enough for Madison to slowly take control of the game.

"We told them at halftime that we've got to keep the defense the way it is, but we've got to make some shots. And we didn't make shots. We didn't make free throws," Switzerland County coach Travis Wrightsman said. "You know, you give up 41 points, you're hoping to be in the game which we were. But unfortunately, you only put in 33 so that makes it even tougher."

Switzerland County (9-14) was far from out of the game and stayed within a single possession for most of the fourth quarter. Aiden Griffith's two free throws with 5:12 to go pulled the Pacers to within 29-27, but the Cubs' Landon True sank two free

Madison's Bronkella to golf at Davis & Elkins

BY DAVID CAMPBELL

When Grace Bronkella visited the campus of Davis & Elkins College she wasn't sure if the West Virginia school was going to be the right fit for her. But her mother, Collette, knew right away.

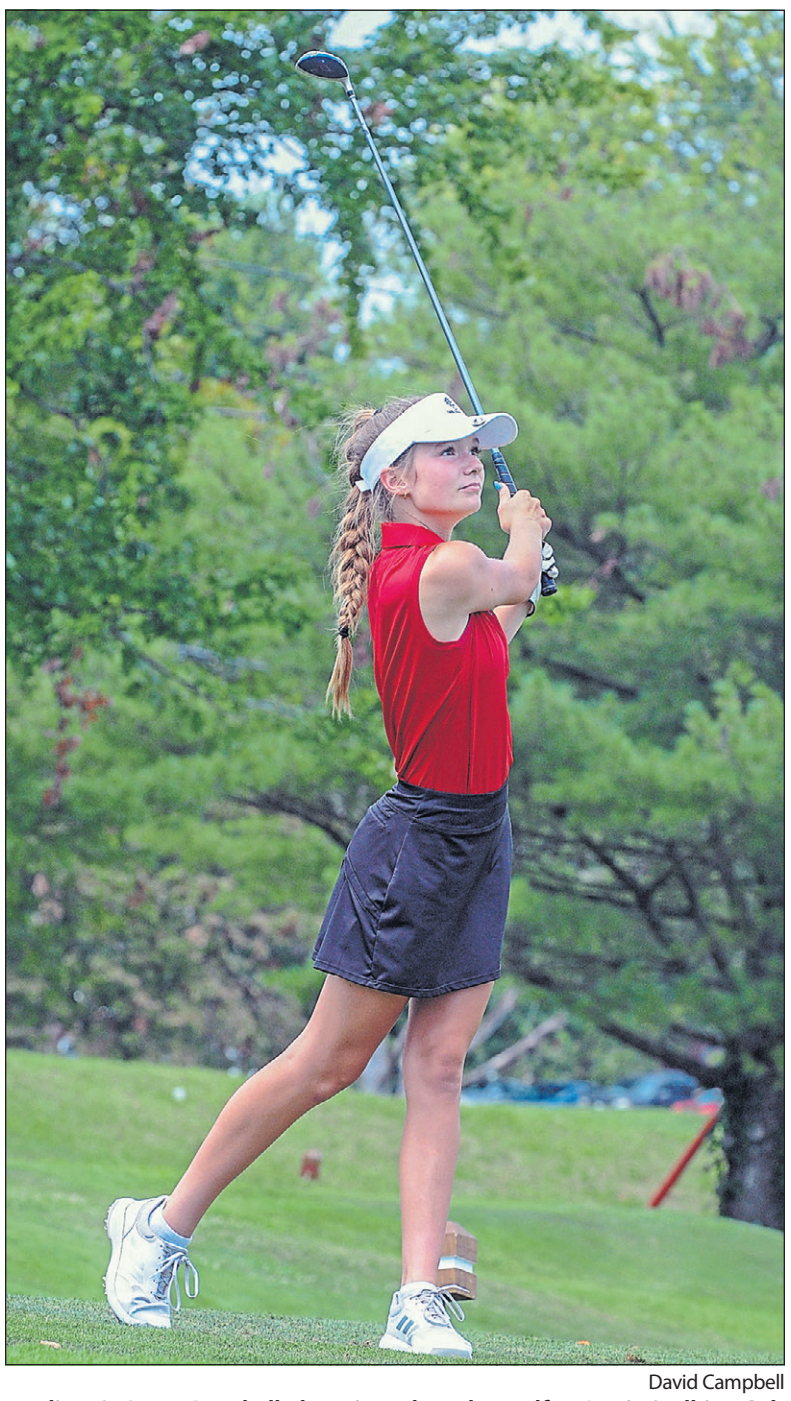
"I visited a lot of colleges, but this one just really stuck out to me. And while we were there, my mom was like 'I can tell that you enjoy this one and that you really love it here,' " Bronkella said. "I met the golf coach and he's really nice and I just really liked the facility. And I wanted to go there."

Weeks after committing, Bronkella officially signed on Monday to play golf at NCAA Division II Davis & Elkins College in Elkins, West Virginia. For Bronkella, it was the culmination of a long journey that saw her struggle her first time on the links as a freshman but end her high school career as the Madison Courier Girls Golfer of the Year.

"My freshman year was very rough. And looking back from my freshman year at sectionals to my senior year at sectionals, it's a huge jump," Bronkella said. "I never thought I'd get a chance to play college golf."

Madison golf coach Jake Shockley said that while Bronkella's growth as a player may have been surprising to some, when you look at Grace the person it was easy to see why she made such a huge improvement.

"She's always had the physical talent and you could see that the pieces were there, the question was whether she was going to work hard enough to be what she could be," Shockley said, "She is a low-key hard worker. She wasn't always out there posting things or showing people how hard she worked. She just went out there and did it, which is the testament to her. She went out there and worked hard in the offseason, which is what it really takes if you want to be really good."



David Campbell

Madison's Grace Bronkella has signed to play golf at Davis & Elkins College in West Virginia.

"I definitely practice a lot. This past summer I was out there like every single day, just practicing for three or four hours a day." Bronkella said.

Bronkella had plenty of choices when it came to playing at the next level. The daughter of two educators, she values the education aspect of college as much as the athletics and for her, finding the right fit was the most important thing.

Davis & Elkins provided that opportunity. While she has not decided on a major — she's leaning toward psychology — she knows that the school is where she wants to be.

"I just really liked everything about it and I'm excited to get there," she said.

Shockley believes Bronkella has a chance to be successful at the next level and can't wait to see what she accomplishes.

"She's got all the tools. Obviously she has things to work on like getting around the course and tidying up little parts of her game, but the physical tools are there. It's always been there," Shockley said. "It's just how far does she want to go? How good does she want to be? She has a bright future."

While Bronkella is excited about moving on, she'll value her time at Madison. Along with golf, she also played volleyball and will run track this spring. She said it's her teammates that she will miss the most.

"Just playing with the people that I have played with," Bronkella said. "I've met a lot of new friends here and I've had a lot of great teammates and a lot of good experiences. I'm going to miss it."

Kentucky wins third straight game

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

GAINESVILLE, Fla. — Oscar Tshiebwe scored 25 points, Jacob Toppin had 19 points and 11 rebounds and visiting Kentucky beat Florida 82-74 on Wednesday night for its third straight victory.

Toppin closed a 15-4 run with a 3-pointer and fast-break dunk to give Kentucky a 74-63 lead with 3:43 left. But Florida scored the next nine points, including six free throws — the last by Kyle Lofton with 1:12 left.

Chris Livingston ended Kentucky's nearly three-minute scoring drought on a three-point play with 49.1 seconds left. Florida missed a shot in the lane and Toppin sealed it with two free throws.

Antonio Reeves added 16 points and Livingston had 10 points and 15 rebounds for Kentucky (19-9, 10-5 SEC). Tshiebwe, who was 12 of 13 from the field, banked in a jumper in the first half to reach 1,000 career points at Kentucky — the 61st in program history to do so.

Tshiebwe scored nine of Kentucky's opening 17 points and Toppin sank a wide open 3-pointer in transition to extend the Wildcats' lead to 20-9.

Florida took its first lead of the first half, 37-36, on Riley Kugel's long 3-pointer with 17 seconds left before the break. The Gators closed the half on a 22-6 run over the final eight minutes after trailing by as many as 15 points.

Kugel made four 3-pointers and scored 24 points for Florida (14-14, 7-8), which has lost five of its last six games. Kowacie Reeves added 16 points. Florida star Colin Castleton was out due to a broken right hand.

TSHIEBWE RANKS 59TH

Tshiebwe ended the night with 1,010 career points at Kentucky and his 25-point night allowed him to pass James Lee, Jared Prickett, Bobby Watson and Jimmy Dan Conner on the Wildcats' career scoring list to stand 59th just behind Ron Mercer (1,013) and Doron Lamb (1,018). Counting his 433 points at West Virginia, Tshiebwe now has a combined 1,443 career points which if all were at Kentucky would rank him 20th between Joe Crawford (1,438) and Johnny Cox (1,461). Dan Issel leads the Wildcats with 2,138.

FAN INTERFERENCE

The game was delayed with 13:47 left in the second half for an official review after Kentucky guard Cason Wallace was grabbed by fans sitting courtside after chasing down a loose ball on the sideline. The fans were removed from their courtside seats before play resumed tied at 50-all.

Utah, South Carolina, Indiana and Stanford No. 1 tourney seeds

BY DOUG FEINBERG
AP BASKETBALL WRITER

Utah would join South Carolina, Indiana and Stanford as No. 1 seeds in the NCAA Tournament if it began now.

The NCAA women's basketball selection committee did its second and final reveal Thursday of the teams in line for the top 16 seeds before selection Sunday. South Carolina, Indiana and Stanford were also listed as top seeds in the earlier reveal.

"That was the easiest part of the day. I am really looking forward to seeing those teams play towards the end of the season," selection committee chair Lisa Peterson said in a phone interview. "Indiana and Iowa, Stanford and Utah play this weekend."

None of Thursday night's games were factored in, including No. 3 Stanford's double-overtime win over No. 21 Colorado. This is the final weekend of the regular season for most major conferences.

The Utes — ranked eighth in the AP Top 25 — moved up to the one-line, replacing UConn, which was beaten by St. John's on Tuesday night. Utah faces Stanford on Saturday to close out its regular season. The Huskies fell to a No. 2 seed, seventh overall.

Peterson said the biggest debate was about who the fourth No. 1 should be — Utah or LSU.

"That was probably the biggest topic of conversation," she said. "You have more information when you're looking at these teams. One thing that stuck out was the number of top 25 and 50 wins when you compare LSU to Utah. It was a difficult choice for sure. One thing we couldn't get past was (LSU's) strength of the schedule."

The top 16 seeds will host first- and second-round games with the regional rounds being played at two neutral sites for the first time instead of the traditional four. Seattle will host half of the Sweet 16 and Greenville, South Carolina, will host the other eight teams.

South Carolina and Indiana were projected as the top seeds in the Greenville Regional with Stanford and Utah in Seattle. The unbeaten Gamecocks were the overall No. 1 seed.

Joining the Gamecocks in their projected bracket were No. 2 Virginia Tech, No. 3 Iowa and No. 4 Michigan. The Hoosiers would have No. 2 UConn, No. 3 Notre Dame and No. 4 Arizona.

The other top teams in Stanford's region were No. 2 Maryland, No. 3 Duke and No. 4 Villanova. Utah would be joined by LSU, Ohio State and Texas.

Arizona was the only team not included in the original reveal that entered the second one. The Wildcats replaced North Carolina.

Teams just outside the top 16 included the Tar Heels, Tennessee, Colorado, Oklahoma and UCLA.

The Big Ten had five teams in the top 16 while the Atlantic Coast Conference and Pac-12 each had three. The Southeastern Conference and Big East had two and the Big 12 had one.

The Final Four will be played in Dallas on March 31 and the NCAA championship game is two days later. Dallas is also hosting the Division II and III championship games on April 1.

Selection Sunday is March 12 (TV: Live on ESPN at 8 p.m.).

The NCAA has been doing in-season reveals for women's basketball since 2015 to give teams an early idea of where they could end up in the bracket.

Today's Puzzle Solved

Severed sister relationship lasts 60 years

AMY DICKINSON ASK AMY

Dear Amy: Two sisters in our extended family have a broken relationship.

When they were young their parents brought foster children into the home.

The eldest foster child was a boy in his early teens. He began sexually assaulting the younger sister, who was eight.

The abuse continued for at least four years. No one in the family was aware of it. The young sister was threatened not to tell anyone.

Fast-forward 20 years. The abuse was revealed, and the older sister said that everyone needed to forgive the predator. She opted to keep him in her life, like a brother.

The victim no longer trusted her sister, and their relationship was never the same. Now the older sister feels rejected by the family because of her continued support of the predator.

She still feels that forgiveness of the predator was the best course, and she can't grasp the depth of her younger sister's hurt.

Sixty years have passed, and the entire family is still clouded by this disloyalty. The older sister feels like she's the victim, due to the palpable rejection she feels from everyone else in the family.

Is there hope after all this time that trust can be re-established? How should they make amends?

They are now all senior citizens, and they could both benefit greatly from each other's companionship and love.

Your advice? – Fractured Family

Dear Fractured: The older sister seems to have spent all of her compassion and forgiveness on the man who sexually abused her young and vulnerable sister during much of the girl's childhood.

Where is her compassion, forgiveness and understanding toward her sister, who suffered as a child – and who might continue to suffer?

Co-worker worries about smoking while pregnant

AMY DICKINSON ASK AMY

Dear Amy: I am a waitress. One of my co-workers is six months pregnant.

Every time she takes a break, she goes out back and smokes cigarettes. Sometimes she smokes weed.

She has been smoking ever since I started here, four months ago.

I'm a mind-your-own-business kind of person, but I have witnessed a family member suffer from asthma. I know that smoking while pregnant increases the chance of the baby having breathing problems.

I know that my co-worker goes to the doctor for prenatal care and stuff, but every time she takes a break, my heart sinks and I feel guilty.

Should I say something to her, and if so, what can I say? — Worried

Dear Worried: Your co-worker is likely under a lot of stress. She is working at a relatively low-wage, physically demanding job while pregnant.

It is common knowledge that smoking is bad for one's health and that smoking while pregnant could negatively affect the unborn baby's health. If your co-worker is seeing her doctor regularly for prenatal visits, then this will have been emphasized many times.

No one should smoke weed while working or while pregnant. Marijuana affects the mother's cognition, coordination, and reaction time.

According to the Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration (SAMHSA.gov): "No amount of marijuana has been proven safe to use during pregnancy or while breastfeeding. In 2018, the American Academy of Pediatrics released its first official guidelines, advising women who are pregnant or nursing to avoid marijuana use because it isn't safe for them or their children.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) — You may need to follow up on details and meet deadlines. A forgotten expense or bill can create an unpleasant experience. You can appeal to someone's generosity if you feel yourself starting to get heated.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) — You could face a situation where policies are being shifted; be alert for mistakes. You should proceed with caution and stop to focus on how to find the more constructive solution. Roll with the punches and trust yourself.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) — You are generous, sympathetic and sensitive but that could make it difficult to fight for yourself. You could find you are struggling with coping skills during hard negotiations. You can use your strengths to spread positivity.

Purdue's Edey makes strong case to be player of year

BY MICHAEL MAROT
ASSOCIATED PRESS

WEST LAFAYETTE — Brian Nash vividly remembers the first impression Zach Edey made at IMG Academy.

The school's coaches were fascinated with the basketball newcomer's size, his potential. They liked his hands, the footwork he developed playing other sports. They thought he could be college basketball's next big thing.

Five years later, the transformation seems almost complete — to the surprise of Nash, IMG's director of basketball operations. Edey, the 7-foot-4, 305-pound Canadian, is compiling numbers that show America's biggest player might also be its best player.

"He's the most dominant player in the country and I would have never thought that would happen this quickly," said Nash, who spent more than 20 seasons coaching at the college level after playing at Kansas State. "We looked at him as a piece of clay."

This more polished version of Edey creates the same wonder among fans he did with in Bradenton, Florida. He towers over almost anyone, his elbows reaching most players' necks thanks to a standing reach of 9 feet, 9 inches.

No. 5 Purdue eagerly exploits its advantage in the post when teams dare to single-cover Edey, and Edey gladly passes the ball when extra defenders converge. At times, the Boilermakers seem content taking shots and letting Edey score on putbacks.

"It's amazing to see," said David Jenkins Jr., Purdue's sixth-year guard. "He's kind of a one of a kind. I've never played with someone like him, probably never will again."

It hasn't always been this way for the Toronto native, who started his athletic career playing hockey and later added baseball. By 14, he'd given up both sports.

His desire to earn a college scholarship to help his mother, Julia, eventually led him to his most natural sport and eventually to AAU basketball and IMG. (His mother is a former basketball player.)

It didn't take coaches long to find a fit for Edey. They put the 16-year-old on a second-tier team for one year, primarily so he could refine his skills and learn to cope with the frustration of smaller players pestering him.

The next season, Edey joined the school's elite national team, where he fought for minutes with three McDonald's All-Americans, an experience that helped shape Edey's selfless philosophy.

"I don't really care about how many points I get," he said recently. "I'm going to focus on rebounding, playing defense, blocking shots. I'll score the ball when I have to, when I'm one-on-one but I'm not going to force one up."

Still, Edey stood out and emerged as an intriguing prospect. Santa Clara chased him early, and Edey initially appeared bound for Baylor. But the IMG coaches advised Edey to consider schools that had demonstrated they could develop big men.

Gonzaga and Purdue emerged as finalists and that's when Purdue coach Matt Painter entered the fray.

When Edey initially arrived at West Lafayette, he seemed more project than prospect; logging 14.6 minutes, scoring 8.7 points and grabbing 4.4 rebounds as a freshman in the 2020-21 season.

But Painter knew there was more to the guy known to his mom as "Big Maple." At IMG, Edey had worked with 7-foot-1 former NBA center and Puerto Rican Olympian Daniel Santiago to develop his post skills and passion for the sport. By his sophomore season, the workaholic emerged as a solid option alongside first team all-Big Ten forward Trevion Williams and future NBA lottery pick Jaden Ivey. Edey wound up nearly doubling his freshman stats, providing glimpses of his forthcoming breakout season.

Edey opened this week leading the Big Ten in scoring (22.1 points) and rebounding (12.7) — ranked fifth and second nationally, respectively. He's 10th nationally in blocks (2.4) and has become a terrific interior passer.

Edey also is a matchup nightmare for opponents. Penn State coach Micah Shrewsberry called him the best player on the best team in the country. And after Edey shredded Michigan State for 68 points and 30 rebounds in two games this season, coach Tom Izzo just shook his head.

"He's bigger than any player I've ever coached against," Izzo said. "When at the end of the day you can stop anywhere this side of the equator and throw the ball in the air and this monster is going to go get it, it makes it a little easier (for Purdue's offense)."

Nebraska coach Fred Hoiberg understands the dilemma perhaps better than most after teaming up with 7-4, 250-pound Rik Smits with the NBA's Indiana Pacers.

"Rik, I think if you looked at him at the same stage of their careers, Zach is just so much bigger than Rik was," Hoiberg said. "(Edey's) body reminds me of Yao (Ming). He's got those thick legs, big shoulders, the wide hips and he's got great stamina for someone of that size."

But he's not just a challenge for defenses: In January, Painter complained opponents were taking advantage of no-calls by getting more physical with Edey.

Longtime college referee Ed Hightower, who critiques officials for the Big Ten, acknowledges Edey's size can be problematic for refs. He also believes Edey has matured as a player and led to him being less foul-prone than the last two seasons.

"You have to concentrate on the balance between physicality and rough play, making sure you don't penalize him because of his size while not giving him an advantage because of his size," Hightower said. "He knows how to use his size, physicality and agility. He's just a great player."

For Purdue, this week's focus is Saturday's rematch between Edey and Trayce Jackson-Davis and No. 14 Indiana.

Nationally, Edey is the center of attention, and the question is, what's next? A Final Four run? The NBA? A return to Purdue? Those who have seen Edey's rapid ascension believe there's no limit.

"He found his passion for the game and when you have success it increases your fire," Nash said. "Now he's got a mean streak to him, too, where he turns those half-hooks into dunks. Zach is the story of the unknown."

Tatum has 31, breaks tie late in OT, Celtics outlast Pacers

BY PHILLIP B. WILSON
ASSOCIATED PRESS

INDIANAPOLIS — Jayson Tatum scored 31 points, including the final four in the last minute of overtime, and the Boston Celtics outlasted the Indiana Pacers 142-138 Thursday night.

Jaylen Brown added 30 points as the Celtics improved to an NBA's best 43-17record.

"It was fun," Brown said. "The more we are tested in those moments, I think it helps for the long run."

It was 138-all with 56.2 seconds left before Tatum hit a pair of free throws. He capped the scoring with a tip-in off the glass with 10.4 seconds to go.

"I'm glad we won," said Tatum, who had only six points at halftime. "I just tried to find ways to make plays on both ends so we could win and everybody could feel better about themselves."

Myles Turner tied his career high with 40 points for the Pacers. He made a career-best eight 3-pointers and Indiana shot 22 of 49 overall on 3s.

"You can't ask for a better fight," Turner said. "That was the No. 1 team in the league. We go toe-to-toe with them and go to overtime. We don't want any pity, but I think we're taking a step in the right direction."

In a game with 17 lead changes by the end of the fourth quarter, the Pacers had the last shot in regulation, but Tyrese Haliburton's deep 3-pointer from the top of key bounced off the back rim.

"I missed and that's on me," Haliburton said. "I should have got us a better (shot). Put it on me."

Haliburton had 22 points and 14 assists. Buddy Hield, the league's 3-point leader, made four 3s and finished with 18 points. Bennedict Mathurin added 19 points off the bench.

Malcolm Brogdon, a former Pacers point guard, scored 24 off the bench for Boston.

"It had a playoff-like atmosphere, we had to withstand some runs, we had to adjust, we had to execute and make plays," Celtics coach Joe Mazzulla said.

MLB's bigger bases could lead to more steals, fewer injuries

BY JAY COHEN
AP BASEBALL WRITER

PEORIA, Ariz. — Like a violin virtuoso using a new music stand, San Diego Padres third baseman Manny Machado noticed a difference right away.

Not only are the bases bigger, but they feel different, too.

"It's definitely different, for sure," said Machado, a two-time Gold Glove winner. "They look better. I just got to kind of keep playing with it and stepping on it and kind of like getting the feel for it. But it's definitely different for sure."

The bigger bases — going from 15- to 18-inch squares — are part of a flurry of changes by Major League Baseball designed to put more action and athleticism back in the game and make it more appealing to a younger generation of potential fans.

When the new rules were adopted by baseball's 11-person competition committee in September, the four players on the panel supported the bigger bases and voted against the use of a pitch clock and limits on defensive shifts.

The new bases — "They look like a pizza box," Red Sox manager Alex Cora cracked — cut down the distance between the bases by 4 1/2 inches. The distance between third and home and home and first was trimmed by 3 inches.

It doesn't sound like much, but the impact could be considerable.

Instead of waiting around for a three-run homer, big league teams could try a more aggressive approach on the basepaths. Coupled with new limits on what MLB calls disengagements — pickoff attempts or steps off the rubber — it's more important than ever that pitchers are quick to the plate and strong-armed catchers stay alert with runners on.

Major league teams finished with 2,486 steals in 3,297 attempts last year, up from 2,214 steals and 2,926 attempts in 2021, according to Sportradar, but much lower than 3,229 steals and 4,365 attempts a decade ago in 2012.

"The run game, preventing the run game, is something that we've talked about, we're going to continue to talk about, because ... the stolen-base attempt should increase a good bit, I think," Dodgers manager Dave Roberts said.

Major league teams finished with 2,486 steals in 3,297 attempts last year, up from 2,214 steals and 2,926 attempts in 2021, according to Sportradar, but much lower than 3,229 steals and 4,365 attempts a decade ago in 2012.

In testing in the minors, two Triple-A leagues used the bigger bases for half of the 2021 season. One experienced a 2.2% increase in successful steals, and the other posted 0.7% increase.

The 2012 season — when Mike Trout led the majors with 49 stolen bases — was the last time the big leagues surpassed 3,000 steals and 4,000 attempts.

"I've definitely been thrown out by less than (4 1/2) inches ... so maybe that starts factoring into results," said Chicago Cubs second baseman Nico Hoerner, who swiped a career-best 20 bases in 22 attempts last year.

Of course, it also gives the majors' top defensive first basemen an even better chance of keeping runners off base altogether.

"I think it could help. It'll give me another inch or so of reach on a throw that wants to pull me off the base," said Arizona Diamondbacks first baseman Christian Walker, who won his first Gold Glove last year.

Besides the activity on the basepaths, Major League Baseball is hoping the change will help reduce injuries. While testing the bigger bases in the minors, there was a 13% decline in what the league calls "injury events near the bases" from 2021 to 2022.

There's more room for first basemen to avoid getting stepped on, or to pull their arm away in time to avoid a batter hustling up the line. It also should help avoid collisions all over the diamond.

"When you walk on the field, you don't really notice it, and getting closer to the bag, you definitely do notice it," said Cubs first baseman Eric Hosmer, a four-time Gold Glove winner. "It seems like a little flatter, too, as well. Not only bigger and longer, but definitely a little flatter.

"But yeah, I think it's going to prevent some injuries, so I think anytime you can even knock that number down one or two guys, that's well worth it."

throws of his own shortly later to push the margin back to four.

Madison steadily built on its lead from there, getting a basket and two free throws by True, a free throw and a bucket from Quincy Reynolds and a free throw from Ryder Jones to build its biggest lead of the night, 39-30, with 1:08 left to play.

Switzerland got a quick 3-pointer from Kadyn Riley to slash the margin back to six (39-33) but the Pacers didn't score again. True hit two free throws and the Swiss missed two free throws down the stretch as the Cubs closed out the win.

"We took what they gave us; we didn't really force a lot of shots" Stotts said. "We didn't settle for a lot of threes and we took good shots and we held onto the ball for only six or seven turnovers. I thought we made some real smart plays on offense in the second half."

Reynolds scored 17 points to lead Madison while Jones and True scored 10 points each.

No Switzerland player reached double figures with Riley and Canaan Johnson leading the way with eight points each.

Both teams now turn their attention to the sectional tournament, which begins next week. Switzerland County plays in the Class 2A Sectional at South Ripley while Madison competes in the Class 3A Sectional at Charlestown.

Switzerland opens the tournament against Milan (7-15) on Tuesday. Wrightsman is pleased to have drawn away from favorite North Decatur (19-5) but also knows that his team has to come ready to compete.

"Switzerland County, Milan and Hauser are all tickled pink with that draw and we've told our guys that Milan, Switzerland or Hauser are going to be in the finals. And I'm like, why can't it be us?" Wrightsman said. "We've got to go out and clean up a few things here the next couple days and practice and be ready to go battle next week."

Madison opens with tourney favorite Scottsburg (16-5) on Wednesday and while Stotts knows that his team is facing a tall task, he also knows that anything can happen despite the Warriors' previous 84-42 win over the Cubs on Jan. 6.

"We've showed that we can finish games. We handled the pressure they were trying to throw at guys and we stepped up," Stotts said. "We're putting all the pieces together and next week we get Scottsburg, a team that came in here and almost scored 60 in the first half, so guys should be a little upset about it. Hopefully we've got a little chip on our shoulder."
